

Journal Inspiration List

Centre for Business and Development Studies

Last updated 10 March 2020

CBDS researchers come from different academic and disciplinary grounds and seek to work together in interdisciplinary efforts on business and development-related themes. Individual researchers are encouraged to publish in the top journals in their own disciplines, or at the very least in journals that are included in the Danish BFI system, in Thomsen's Journal Citation Reports (JCR), and/or in the Academic Journal Guide (AJG) of the Chartered Association of Business Schools. However, researchers are not dissuaded from publishing in journals that are considered locally or regionally important by collaborators in the global South, and/or in journals which are relatively young and are deemed to be of strategic importance to push a specific intellectual agenda. CBDS researchers are also encouraged to produce monographs and edited collections with reputable publishers, and to publish jointly with their collaborators in the global South. When possible, publications should be made available through open access and/or institutional repositories (e.g. pre-print versions placed in CBS repository) in view of improving accessibility in the global South. CBDS researchers have compiled this inspiration list of interdisciplinary journals where have published and/or would like to.
